Ready Steady – Let’s go and cook...

Vita Whitaker, who recently completed a Master’s degree at Sheffield Hallam University, was asked to design and supply a bespoke “mobile” kitchen for the University’s Hospitality School. The new catering facility would be used by both staff and students at various events throughout year, kicking off with the popular Sheffield Food Festival in September. After receiving a short brief, Whitco applied their skill and expertise to create a bespoke kitchen design, which comprised of a mobile sink and hand-washing station, two large preparation and cooking areas that included refrigeration and induction and smart tower with a built in oven and microwave. All four items were designed to be used together or individually and able to connect to mains electric or a generator supply.

The key success factors of the kitchen design were:

- Its ergonomic and aesthetically pleasing design
- Its versatility
- Energy saving
- Its supply of hot and cold water and discharge of foul water via an innovative mobile water supply
- For different theatre style applications, the panel behind the innovative washing up and hand washing station was designed to support a monitor and video cameras should the event require them.

Careful engineering ensured that all mains cables were carefully placed in stainless steel conduit and safely hidden away from vision

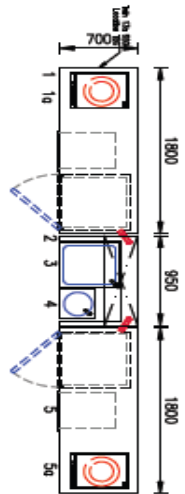

The mobile kitchen was delivered and installed in a marquee in Sheffield city centre and proved a great success with both the chefs and the general public.
